

foam & motor skills

The Faculty strives for creation of new perception of educational process, concentrating on enhancing imagination abilities and focusing on relations between function and form with the general goal of human needs' fulfilment. The main assumption of the didactic process is to develop the abilities of rational thinking, ordered analysis and synthesis, self-awareness, interpretation of the experienced phenomena and decision-making.

Based on the above assumptions, the Faculty educates designers whose task is not only to match the basic human needs, but also to overcome existing social barriers. It especially addresses design in the area of health and handicapped care, keeping in mind all those who feel overwhelmed by the contemporary civilisation.

Product design by students from faculty of Industrial Design and Interior Design under supervision of:
PhD Anna Miarka
PhD Rafał Dobruchowski

Multifunction mat with ladybird

NS 1594

Soft, pleasant to touch mat is a great idea for the youngest children. It provides a safe place while playing. Sound surprises hidden inside arouse interest in mobile activity of the youngest. The mat is completed with 6 colourful and soft cylinders that can be easily joined together. They can be used both as a back-rest or used separately as elements for developing motor skills. The big, soft ladybird pillow has vivid colours, is an additional attraction which makes the mat even more interesting and creates a worthwhile exploring area.

foam animal path

Climbing, crawling, sliding. Simple activities bring a lot of joy when you're only a few years old! When movement colours and happy is guaranteed. Animal paths, made of soft but stiff foam, improve motoricity skills, space orientation and the awareness of the position of the body. Proper integration of these aspects is essential for appropriate development of planning reactions and movement. Furthermore, it leads to proper regulation of muscle tension and coordination of the muscles. All shapes have anti-slip bottom and Velcro enabling stable connecting.
